

CREATIVE WRITING WITH MARIO RINVOLUCRI

Course dates

30 June - 6 July

Course fees

£685

Course location

University of Kent

Target audience

Teachers whose own language level runs from B2 to bilingual/native.

Teachers whose students' ages range from 8 to 100!

Teachers for whom writing in MT or foreign languages has always been a joy.

Teachers who hate "creative writing" in any language (Such colleagues are particularly welcome).

Teachers eager to lap up wide areas of English outside their normal range

You will need B1+/B2 to C1/C1+ level of English.

Course summary

Exposure to a rich range of English text types both through eye and ear. You need to swim in the waters of the 16th century biblical language through to the normal ways that teenagers express themselves in the English of today, tomorrow and the day after.

All our getting to know each other in the group will be through the medium of writing.

This course will help you with preparing your students for the written composition parts of their major exams.

Course content

The letter/email as a major instrument of teacher-student, classroom communication

Letters/emails between the students across the classroom

Letters and emails from students out to others beyond the classroom

List writing and Poetry writing

Writing under the influence of fine text

Dialogue writing (inner voice), Dialogue writing with an addressee outside oneself

Brain-storming techniques preparatory to writing an expository composition

Story writing across the language levels
